Presents

"An Introduction to Counselling & Psychotherapy Research"

With Special Guest Presenters:

Professor John McLeod. Professor of Psychology, University of Abertay. Professor McLeod is author of Qualitative Research in Counselling and Psychotherapy, Doing Counselling Research, Case Study Research in Counselling and Psychotherapy, and books and articles on a wide range of topics in counselling and psychotherapy. Professor McLeod is committed to promoting the relevance of research as a source of knowledge for practice, and in the development of methods of research that are consistent with the aims and values of therapy. He is convinced that learning about research has the potential to make students and trainees more effective practitioners.

Dr Andrew Reeves. Editor of the BACP's Counselling and Psychotherapy Research Journal (CPR), University Counsellor, Supervisor. Dr Andrew Reeves is a BACP Senior-Accredited Practitioner who has worked at the University of Liverpool Student Counselling Service for several years. Prior to this he worked in psychiatric services as a counsellor and Approved Social Worker. Dr Reeves was based within a multi-disciplinary mental health team undertaking statutory and non-statutory mental health assessments in addition to providing individual and group therapy. He also worked within a mental health crisis team offering out-of-hours intervention to people experiencing acute mental health distress. As a Social Worker he has also worked in child protection and with vulnerable adults (he continues to be a Registered Social Worker). As a researcher, Andrew's interest lies in counselling and psychotherapy interventions with people who are suicidal.

Prof. Mary Creaner is an Assistant Professor and Research Co-ordinator with the Doctorate in Counselling Psychology and is the Course Director of the M.Sc./P.Grad.Dip. in Clinical Supervision, Trinity College, Dublin. Mary holds a Doctorate in Psychotherapy and is an IACP Accredited Psychotherapist and Clinical Supervisor. As a researcher, Mary is particularly interested in practitioner research and research that informs clinical practice in both therapy and supervision'.
